Assessment of Dissociation in Play Therapy

Are you sometimes puzzled by your client's age regressive behaviors, rapid emotional state changes, and/or memory gaps? This workshop will provide you with play-based assessment tools for Complex Trauma and Dissociative Disorders supplemented by formal checklists. In the course of play therapy these regressive behaviors and abrupt changes in affect may reflect the child's expression of dissociated parts of self. Once identified these dissociative and trauma-related expressions need an attuned response from play therapists. We will discuss specific techniques for stabilizing the child and establishing trust in the playroom. Symbolic meanings and metaphors used by children who dissociate will be analyzed to better understand and respond to the traumatic experiences they are communicating through their play.

Learning Objectives Participants will:

1. Practice at least 2 playful techniques to assess for Complex Trauma/PTSD, and Dissociative Disorders
2. Be able to describe one playful stabilization technique.

3. Be able to use the Child and Adolescent Checklists and Scales to assess for possible dissociation in play therapy clients.

4. Identify and evaluate dissociative behaviors that appear in the course of play therapy.

5. Analyze how trauma presents itself in play therapy through symbolic meaning of the toys and fantasy play scenarios.

6. Utilize attuned responses to the metaphors the child is using to process their trauma during the course of play therapy.
